My Dear Friends,

Tonight marks the close of my year of mourning for my beloved father.

My father taught me to believe in a greater future for the Jewish people and all of society. He taught me how to live for others and believe in myself. He put family first, shared his resources liberally to anyone in need and was my greatest champion. His loss still leaves me grieving; his life still inspires me to maximize my years.

My family and I are deeply grateful to each of you, our YU family throughout the world, for your kindness and warmth throughout the year.

I have no doubt that right now my father is working on our behalf, serving as a divine advocate, for his family, his grandchildren in the IDF, the Jewish people and all of our society.

May his memory be for a blessing and may we see salvation come soon.

My warmest wishes,

Rabbi Dr. Ari Berman
